Chicago, Illinois August 01, 2008 -- www.BizBlindDate.com a business networking service that leverages the internet to connect business people together for mutually beneficial face-to-face business meetings has been nominated for an Entrepreneurial Excellence Award, Innovation Category, by the Business Ledger newspaper.

"This is a total surprise and quite an honor" remarked J. Miles Harding, who jokingly refers to himself as BizBlindDate's "Chief Dating Officer". The remark was made at a private gathering celebrating the Company's early success in the Chicago marketplace.

Continued Harding, "As I understand it some of our business networking members submitted our name to the Business Ledger on our behalf."

BizBlindDate which uses a patent pending technology to match business people who are looking to network with one another together for face-to-face business meetings just recently launched into the Chicago market.

"We're on schedule to have over 1000 new members in the Chicagoland area by the end of 2008, which is unheard of growth for a networking organization that is not virtual."

When pressed for details Harding acknowledged that BizBlindDate will soon be available in other parts of the United States, but would not comment on the Company's expansion strategy remarking that "That is a conversation for a future date".
